

Article 2

The individual is sacred. All human beings are born free and equal before the law. They enjoy inalienable rights, namely the right to life, freedom, the development of their personality and respect for their dignity. The rights of the individual are inviolable. Public authorities have the obligation to respect, protect and promote the individual. Any sanction leading to the deprivation of human life is forbidden.