

Article 2

Every person has the right to life, physical and moral integrity, liberty, security, work, property and possession, and to be protected in the conservation and defence of the same. The right to honor, personal and family intimacy is guaranteed. Indemnification, in conformity with the law, is established for damages of a moral character.